'ROUGHHOUSE'

Gun Mishap Wounds Two Boys

By AR KENT

Two Saanich boys are in hospital with serious wounds received in a "roughhouse" with an older brother shortly before 7 a.m. today in their parents' kitchen.

Daniel William Patterson, six, and Robin Melvin, eight, of 1503 Charlton, both were shot through the lower chest by a bullet from a .22 semi-automatic rifle which had been left on a kitchen table the night before.

Daniel, reported to have liver and lung injuries, was shot through the right side of his body and is in "fair" condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Robin, shot through the left chest, is in "good" condition, St. Joseph's reported.

Both were hit by the same bullet, which passed through Daniel and lodged in Robin, Saanich police said.

Detectives and juvenile officers are still investigating the incident.

UP EARLY

They said the two wounded boys and their 10-year-old brother Richard were up before other members of the family, got dressed and went into the kitchen to play. The parents were still asleep.

When one of the boys picked up the rifle, Robin ran behind Daniel as the trigger was pulled.

Their father, Samuel Patterson, said the rifle had been left on the table under a pile of clothes, but was found by the boys before he awoke.

Shaken by the experience, he had this to say to other people who leave guns where children can get them:

"In my opinion, any gun in their house should get rid of them, especially if they have children."

"They always say 'It can't happen to me.'"

Patterson said he raises calves at his rural home and had the rifle handy "because something has been biting the calves — a mink, I think."

"I've been sitting up there by the barn at night waiting for it, and I get up in the night and first thing in the morning, too."

"I usually get up at 6:30, but not today, being Saturday. My older boy, Donnie, usually wakes me before he goes to work, but he knew I didn't have anything to do today."

He said he did not own a gun himself. This one belongs to Donald, 19, the eldest of the family of 10 children. The rifle is a bolt-action .22 long.

Patterson jumped up, rushed to the kitchen and as soon as he found what had happened called the telephone operator, who got in touch with Saanich police.

Police ambulance took Robin to hospital and a fire department crew and ambulance took the more seriously hurt boy to emergency.

BERLIN — An East German wood carver has designed a "Communist chess set" composed of workers instead of royal figures.

The anti-Communist information bureau in West Berlin described the following changes:

The king becomes a de-throned economic planner. Castles are factory workers in defence uniforms. Bishops are athletes.

Pawns are workers of various trades. Knights become rider-free horses.

The queen remains a woman, but she is intended to depict the "progressive intelligentia."

LONDON — Britons today learned that Frank Cousins, powerful trade union leader who advocates unilateral nuclear disarmament, has a son working at an H-bomb plant.

STRATFORD, Ont.—A magistrate Friday fined Ronald Zimmer, 34, for assault and then said he often feels like stepping off the bench to "belt some of you fellows."

Zimmer was fined $25 for punching theatre usher John William Edwards.

"There are lots of times I'd like to get down and belt some of you fellows who get called to court for silly things," Magistrate A. F. Cook said. "But I can't do it. We are all bound by conventions."

A date early in January was available for the dancing troupe from the Republic of Guinea but commission members concluded the show was too risky for this community.

"I think allowing this show to perform could leave us open to criticism," said chairman J. W. Scott. "Some people might consider it immoral. Perhaps if all the ministerial associations in town approved, we would be covered."

"We would be, but the girls on stage would not be," said Alderman Keit Hymmen, commission member.

LONDON—Rae Duval, a 28-year-old London musician, Friday night claimed a world record after clubbing a drum for 100 hours, a minute and 15 seconds. The previous mark was 84 hours and 13 seconds.

City Hall Plans

VICTORIA HAS TWO PROPOSALS before it for new City Hall accommodation—one revealed in detail, the other undisclosed.

Naturally the council intends to give each serious study before reaching any conclusions. No doubt the mayor and aldermen will want the public to be fully informed on both, since either will involve expenditure of considerable civic funds.

The proposal of the Marwell Construction Company, which has outlined particulars of its plan, calls for a modern business building on the present City Hall site, with adequate provision in it for civic departments. They would, according to statements of the principals, be housed efficiently at an annual net cost of nearly $30,000 a year more than the city pays for the maintenance of its present old building.

The rental itself would be $165,000 to the city, but the total would be reduced by revenue from the property, saving of interest on funds that would be borrowed if a new City Hall were to be financed by the city, and savings on operation and maintenance.

It will be for the financial experts of the city to study and explain the difference in rent and actual "true" costs.

On the face of it, an annual extra charge of $30,000 does not seem prohibitive, though it is conceivable that indeterminate factors in such matters as private rental to other tenants may qualify that total.

Were the plan to be accepted, Victoria would have new premises for its civic business—(although it would not own them)—and they are long overdue. The capital would also have a modern office and professional building of substantial attraction that would help to rehabilitate a section of the downtown area.

The latter feature is worth noting. Customarily the erection of a good new building tends to raise the standard of adjacent property, since, if the latter is commercial, it must undergo improvement to meet the competition provided by space in the new structure.

No comment can be offered on the alternative proposal that may emerge from the Dominion Construction Company. Details of its offer have not been announced, if they have been worked out. Pre-

Loose Talk

THE SPEECHES OF VICTORIA'S Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, well-written and provocative, have a habit of making headlines. His latest, made in Vancouver, avers that children today have to fight off "a parade of filth . . . in newspapers, magazines, newsstand books, advertising and TV." He adds that "Our newspapers emphasize the crimes and perversions and the whole range of defects of our society because they allege that's what readers want."

If Dr. Keenleyside had confined his remarks to the pornography of the so-called "girlie" magazines found on newsstands; to certain paper-back novels disseminated from the same stalls; and to the crimes and violence of TV, few people would question his thesis. But when he includes newspapers in this blanket indictment, he is very wide of the mark.

We can think of one or two tabloids in England which deserve the sumably a plan from that company, based on construction at the present site, would involve a combination building also.

Suggestions for a new City Hall are familiar enough to Victorians. For the last 20 years at least they have been proposed from time to time. The present building is unquestionably obsolete in many particulars, though once it is to be replaced there will likely be the usual contentions that it is good enough for the purpose it serves. That, also, is a familiar reaction.

There is, however, in Victoria now an attitude more conducive to action on a new City Hall than in recent decades. The community is moving ahead on construction. Victoria College is erecting new buildings. The Royal Jubilee Hospital is proceeding with its extensions. The Law Courts are being built.

This progressive atmosphere coupled with the unquestioned value of dressing up a part of town which needs improvement, and the prospects of financing the project, place the new City Hall proposal in a favorable light.

There are, of course, many matters still to be settled. One of them concerns the probability that in not too remote a future this capital will require a City Hall for the whole of Greater Victoria. The fact that the Marwell plan provides for the release of the city from its tenancy commitments seems to furnish adequate protection on that score.

Similarly, if there were no amalgamation, Victoria could build its own City Hall, separate and distinct from any commercial building, when, where and if it wished. That point is probably more important than it appears at the moment. It is questionable if a city, with a capital's pride, would be prepared to share housing in an office building indefinitely.

Another question arises: Is the city prepared to go into the office rental business—by subletting space in the proposed new building—in competition with the private firms in that field who pay taxes to the city?

The council has established its firm position that no hasty decision will be reached on the proposals.

They call for serious study before any judgment is passed. In the meantime, the presentation of plans encourages Victorians to look forward to development long awaited.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

MANY interesting creatures can be seen along the cleared right-of-way of the power lines.

Hike off the Prospect Lake Road to the high rock outcrop and down into the sharp gullies.

There the Western Red-backed salamander can be seen sunning itself on a rock, but staying close by some rotten log ready to take cover if any predator should appear.

Black-widow spiders can be found under rock mounds, easily distinguished by their foot-black, shiny bodies.

Many cocoons of the spider family can be found if you turn over a dry rock or look on the inner side of a dry log.

The cocoons look like woolly blobs left there to dry out.

Millipedes and centipedes with their many legs can be seen scurrying for shelter as you disturb their habitat. These creatures are interesting to watch as they run or climb over a stick or down in some depression; they seem to glide more than run.

Many kinds of beetles live under the logs and stones; they make an interesting study, all going about their allotted task in the great scheme of life.

Be sure you place the stone or log back in its proper place so that the creatures' homes are not too greatly disturbed.

Where the rocks had been blasted to clear the right-of-way, and left open to the weather, the lichens are taking hold, setting up the process of new life where none grew before.

LOOSE ENDS

Britain's Defence Policy Based on a Curious Paradox

LONDON: While the Labor opposition is split in suicidal strife between the moderate Gaitskellites and the theoreticians of unilateral disarmament, the British Government is going steadily ahead with a defense policy based on a curious paradox.

"Nuclear weapons," the official spokesman of the Government assured this correspondent with a candor seldom displayed in Parliament, "are regarded as our supreme danger. In fact, they have been the salvation of the world. They've made direct military action on any large scale practically impossible. And therefore they must be preserved until we have reduced the threat of non-nuclear weapons, or conventional war."

Scarborough was rigged by a complex artificial voting system and means little except, in all probability, the re-election of the Conservative Government for another decade or so.

"All our defence plans," the Government's spokesman explained, "are based on deterrence, but not just the deterrence of atoms. If all we had was atoms Russia could nip off real estate all over the place and we couldn't do anything to stop it except by launching total nuclear war certain to destroy everybody."

"So we need a spectrum of deterrents, including conventional weapons, to stop any local aggression at the beginning before it accelerates into total war. The deterrent is, in fact, from atoms to infantrymen. If you leave a single gap in the lower line anywhere you give Russia the temptation of adventure leading to ruin for everybody. That's why unilateral disarmament in Britain is sheer nonsense, an encouragement to war."

But, as the spokesman added, Britain and the West cannot build up conventional forces without destroying their living standards and economic systems. Hence the West's conventional forces must be just strong enough to deter local aggressions while behind them stand the ultimate nuclear deterrent which no sane Russian Government will provoke.

How, this reporter asked, will the NATO partners decide whether a local incident requires only a conventional response or all-out retaliation? Will Britain have any control over the decision of its giant ally, the United States?

"AS to that," the spokesman replied with a typical British understatement, "I can only tell you that we shall have an effective say in the great decision, if the necessity arises. But of course no one can know exactly how political control would work in an emergency because you have no precedent in former wars and you can't experiment with atomic weapons in advice. This, however, it will be an 'extremely tricky business,'" the spokesman admitted, to decide how far the aggressor's intentions go. Certainly if an incident occurs in Europe, the real heart of the power struggle, "we don't intend to bang off our nucs till we see if the attack is serious."

The notion that NATO can fight a limited European war with small-scale atomic weapons is quite unrealistic, the British government believes, since Russia, faced with even small nuclear bombs, "can't tell whether we intend to go the whole way or not. Naturally, it will reply with full-scale nuclear attack on us."

How, this reporter asked, will the NATO partners decide whether a local incident requires only a conventional response or all-out retaliation? Will Britain have any control over the decision of its giant ally, the United States?

"AS to that," the spokesman replied with a typical British understatement, "I can only tell you that we shall have an effective say in the great decision, if the necessity arises. But of course no one can know exactly how political control would work in an emergency because you have no precedent in former wars and you can't experiment with atomic weapons in ad-

"But I'll say this—we are not beefing about our own position. Besides, we have a balance of power, or terror, now and we think it will continue. We don't think the Russians will care to break it and destroy themselves."

What of China?

"It's said," the spokesman remarked, "that the Chinese have so many people they don't fear all-out war—they'll be plenty of Chinese left afterwards. I don't think the top men in China really believe that, you know. And as China grows more prosperous and has more to lose in war the will to avoid it will increase, as is happening in Russia already. The richer you are, the more easily you are deterred from war."

"THAT'S why we want to see Russia and China raise their living standards and therefore why we think it is foolish to restrict trade with them except in direct strategic goods, of course. They want more consumer goods. More power to them. The pressure of the Russian and Chinese people for more goods is all in favor of peace and is probably Mr. K.'s greatest problem."

This extraordinarily frank outline of Britain's real strategic position and inner thinking does not mean that it is opposed to disarmament. Quite the contrary, as a second dispatch will explain.

FROM OTTAWA

Leaves Are Falling, and Parliament Is Not Yet Called

WITH his long-delayed cabinet shuffle out of the way, Prime Minister Diefenbaker's next big decision is to set the date of the opening of Parliament.

There is no hope now of a fall session; the trees in the Gatineau Hills, across the Ottawa River are in the full blaze of their autumn colors, and the night air has a nip of frost in it. Autumn is here now, and still the MP's and the Parliamentary staff await the call.

It was the Prime Minister himself who first raised the subject of a fall session. He threw out little hints in the Commons, teased the Conservative caucus, and generally created the impression he was going to call Parliament in.

Things reached the point where key Commons personnel were told to adjust their holiday schedule so they could be on hand in mid-October. Two few MP's expected more than a two or two and one-half month break when they left for their constituencies.

What happened to stall the sitting?

'CLEARLY A DISADVANTAGE TO HAVE IDEAS'

Leave Reading Till After You're 25, and Where Are You?

WHENEVER I get the opportunity to harangue the generation which will be governing this country from about 1990 to 2010 A.D., I try to impress upon them the fact that by the time they are 25 years old they will have done half of all the serious reading they are ever going to do. By 25, I mean reading

I mean books which contain an important thesis or idea or complex of ideas: important, be it understood, to a person as a thinking animal, not as a moneymaker, provider, greeter, commuter and subscriber to a burial fund. Needless to say, my hoarse injunctions are met with an incredulous smile: plenty of time for reading, these disbelieving looks imply, when we have enjoyed ourselves—after all, you're only young once—and selected a life-work and should it be "or?" found a mate and settled down.

Now, I shall be the first to admit that I could be wrong about this—at one time or another in my life I have been wrong about practically everything—and it is possible that the world is entering a phase in which ideas, abstract ideas, do not matter at all. It may be that the education authorities who defend the limp lettuce we call secondary education are quite right in providing encouragement for young people to think for themselves, no incentive to earn the views of great men and

Is this another example of the Prime Minister's well-known tendency to delay, to put off until tomorrow what he can do today?

The answers can be found in examining the reasons why Parliament should be called into session now. There is a pressing need for government action to solve first the urgent question of unemployment, and second, to lay the groundwork for a more buoyant economy by attacking deep-rooted economic problems.

Almost from the day Parliament closed its doors on the last session, committees of experts and committees of the cabinet itself have been meeting, examining the problems, and seeking solutions that can be put into legislation.

Against those who argue for deficit financing as a means of putting men to work are those who say the budget must be balanced. Against those who say public works will stir up the economy are those who argue for tax cuts and concessions.

The result is a stalemate, and the inescapable conclusion that Parliament hasn't been called because the Government hasn't made up its mind what it intends doing, if anything.

But it does not dispense with the primary problem: what is Parliament going to do when it does?

Public Works Minister David Walker has clearly indicated the Government doesn't intend priming the housing pump with any degree of enthusiasm.

This procedure would lend a note of urgency to the proceedings, neatly distinguishing the fact that the Government will wait until what may be too late to accomplish its goals.

But it does not dispense with the primary problem: what is Parliament going to do when it does?

Most of them can only be solved in Parliament.

But the leaves are falling in the Gatineau, and Parliament is not yet called.

By TONY EMERY

daily newspaper, the weekly magazine, odd programs on television, P.T.A. panel discussions and Readers' Digest.

I have heard some pessimists proclaim that this is better than having no ideas at all. I doubt it.

I don't blame students for the decline of interest in ideas: I blame a society that judges everything by size, and that believes that money is the only measure of value. I don't blame a belief in Planned Obsolescence as the basis of a healthy economy, that gauges the worth of an education by the salary that the graduate may aspire to.

The remarkable thing to me is that a few students manage to reach university with the spark of curiosity still unquenched by the torrent of indigestible facts poured on them, particularly in Grades 8 and 9. These students descend on a college library in the manner of a Thomas Wolfe, trying to inhale the world's ideas in a dizzying series of deep breaths, and I feel guilty at the thought that so much of our students' time is taken up with lectures that they get little enough time to read widely.

But I must repeat my earlier warning, the croaking Carpe Diem with which I opened this piece: Read now, play later, for the time cometh when you will find yourself too busy even to keep up with the comic strips, Leave your reading until after you are 25, and where are you? Mowing the lawn, washing the car, playing with the kids, bowing with the gang—and watching television. When are you going to find time then?

I happen to detest the word "Intellectual" with its overtones of beards and sandals, vegetarianism, folk-dancing and fashionable philosophy, but if the difference between "intellectual" and "non-intellectual" is the difference between those who hold that ends are more important than means, and those who hold exactly the opposite view, then I must take my stand with the simple masses, and just hope that nobody will recognize me behind the ginger beard that I shall hasten to grow.

These ends, I hold, are not material things or collections of things: they are ideas, abstractions, which in days gone by added up to something the Greeks called the Good Life. And these ideas to which the thinking animal aspires are sought and found by him in books: books take time to read, and many will have to be sampled and rejected before the seeker finds the idea that suits him best: he will not put up, as most people will, with a ready-made kit of ready-made notions handed out along with the parental three-hots-and-a-cot, or sandwiched between scholarly excursions into H. and P.D. (Unit III, Your First Date) and P.E. (Unit VI, Alleman to the Left) at school.

It is because the important books take time to read that they are not in fact read; because they are not easy to comprehend at a glance, they are laid aside for some future occasion; and because they are laid aside, they join the great army of books that people are Always Meaning To Read.

Meanwhile, what ideas we possess are provided by the cartoonists of Chas. Addams. There is a humorous situation for you, if you enjoy the cartoons of Chas. Addams.

The young man who rides his bicycle, or who walks, or who runs, is an important member of our communities. He is a young businessman who succeeds on the standard of performance he establishes—a boy who takes on responsibility, discharges it and thereby learns many of the lessons which go to make the good citizen.

Writing History in Pittsburgh

FOR A WHILE IN PITTSBURGH you couldn't even hear Mr. Khrushchev shout.

The city, wildly exuberant after the storybook ending of a storybook series—a home run in the second half of the seventh game's ninth inning—acclaimed its heroes, went mad, for the happiest of reasons and wrote the kind of history it had not written for 35 years.

That was the wind-up of the series. The indomitable Yankees had been beaten again, beaten in games that fluctuated wildly from tight victories by the Pirates to one-sided runaways when the New Yorkers won

City's Business Women In Spotlight's Glare

By Marguerite Laughlin

Business Women's Week, starting Sunday, will focus attention on the achievements of women in business and the professions.

The week will give Victoria an opportunity to become better acquainted with the program of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women, a great international organization.

The week is planned to demonstrate women's contribution as producers, consumers, taxpayers and citizens, and to develop interest in each community in offering conditions in which women can achieve fuller recognition and greater enjoyment of public responsibilities.

Members in business and professional women's clubs include employers and employees from every walk of life. Many have special training in business, nursing and teaching, and a number have university degrees. They bring years of training and experience to their work.

TAKE PRIDE

Some have invested in businesses of their own. Some are professional or semi-professional workers. Married and single, young and old, they support themselves and often others. They take pride in their work, for their livelihood depends on their performance. As citizens, they take a constructive part in community projects.

They are organized women brought together for a high purpose, through a philosophy voiced by convention-adopted policies.

APPOINTMENTS

The clubs in the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women have worked for many and varied projects in the 30 years since it was organized.

They have been interested in the appointment of women from every province to the Senate of Canada; the appointment of qualified women to policy-making administrative and judicial commissions and boards of government at the federal, provincial, and municipal levels.

The federation has also done much to bring about equal pay for equal work, while other projects have been to place women on juries; the repeal of the policies and laws that discriminate against women; support of the United Nations and its efforts to improve the status of women, and active support of many worthwhile community efforts.

NEW PROGRAM

This year at federation's biennial convention in Winnipeg employment conditions was a subject much discussed and a program of education and interpretation was recommended to the federal government. It asked that employers through educational measures be encouraged to institute job evaluation that will set a rate for the job which will be paid to the person, man or woman, capable of discharging the responsibilities of the job.

At the luncheon Mayor Percy B. Scurrah will officially proclaim Oct. 16 to 22 to be observed as Business Women's Week.

Climax of the week will be Saturday, Oct. 22, when members of participating clubs entertain 250 members of the Silver Threads at tea in First United Church Hall with a musical program.

Local clubs taking part in the week-long program all have similar aims and objectives for the betterment of conditions and opportunities for gainfully employed women.

Eight Clubs Join In Busy Week

Eight women's groups in Victoria have joined to mark current Business Women's Week.

They are Altrusa Club, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, Christian Business Women, Credit Women's Breakfast Club, Soroptimists Club, Stagettes, University Women's Club and the Business and Professional Women's Club. Convener is Miss Mary King of the last named club.

Members of the eight groups will attend morning service in First Baptist Church this Sunday, followed by a luncheon at Chez Marcel.

Victor One of Five Charter Clubs Formed

Thirty years ago! To some it is a time only vaguely remembered, but to the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, it means 30 years of achievement.

The federation marked its 30th anniversary last July.

From five charter clubs, Montreal, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Victoria and Vancouver, have developed 160 clubs with a membership of over 7,000.

During the past 30 years business and professional women's objectives have broadened in scope to meet the ever increasing need of employed women in Canada's rapidly expanding economy.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED

The Women Make News

A few scant years ago activities in church or home were the only means by which a woman might read her name in a newspaper.

Today, a single issue of a newspaper may report on the activities of women in the city council, give an account of a brilliant woman surgeon performing a delicate operation, or feature a clever woman lawyer receiving congratulations from a judge for the presentation of a law suit.

This week, Oct. 16 to 22, attention will be focussed on the increasing contribution women are making to Canada's development.

In cities and towns in every province of Canada women are observing annual Business Women's Week by re-dedicating themselves to play a more effective part in the life of their community.

Hon. Erick Willis, Lieutenant-governor of Manitoba, was invested as a Knight of Grace in the order.

Others invested as Knights of Grace include John Valentine Clyne, retired justice of the British Columbia Supreme Court, Senator Stanley S. McLean, and Fred Boyd Brown, all of Vancouver.

New Junior High Set for Cowichan

(From Duncan Bureau)

Cowichan School Board expects to call tenders in December for construction of a second junior high school to cost $261,000, Wilf Peck, chairman of the board's building and sites committee, said today.

Architects are preparing plans for the new junior high to be erected adjacent to the Alexander Elementary School in Duncan. Plans call for the school to be ready for occupancy next September.

To provide access to the new school the school board has asked North Cowichan Council to extend Beverly Street through to York Road.

The new junior high school is the second of two authorized by ratepayers who approved a $1,155,292 school loan referendum last year. The first, Mt. Prevost junior high school on Somenos Road, is nearing completion and will be ready for students early in January.

Department of education has approved a site on Gibbins Road for a new three-room elementary school. The department will now be asked by the school board to prepare "expandable plans" for a three-room school with covered play area. The school is expected to cost between $50,000 and $55,000 and is planned for completion by next September.

Sooke Telephone Cut-Over Tonight

Amalgamation Vote Set for Thursday

Owner electors of Ladysmith will vote Thursday on amalgamation with adjoining areas which would increase the area of the municipality 10 times.

A "yes" vote would also increase the population about 40 per cent and boost taxable assessment 75 per cent.

Mayor W. C. Moore said it appeared that citizens wanted a sewage system but the one presented was perhaps too large in scope.

A majority vote of 60 per cent is required for the bylaw to pass.

Thus there is the possibility a second bylaw may be presented but on a reduced scale.

Total was 376 voted for the bylaw and 274 against. There were six spoiled ballots.

By ISABEL QUIGLY

When J. B. Priestley's Literature and Western Man appeared early this spring, I read it and decided not to write about it until I had been able to read it again. A second reading has confirmed my original high opinion of the book, and I recommend it to you warmly.

It is not a history of Western literature, nor is it that juicelike thing a "survey." It is the personal response of a man who is himself a writer, to whom literature means more than anything else in life, and who has been reading widely for about half a century.

It is the fact that Priestley is himself a writer that I want to stress; he knows what literary work is, and his judgments are those of a thoroughly-going professional; he is neither an amateur, to whom writers have a special quality of magic, nor is he a critic, to whom writers are article-fodder.

In a special sense, he is writing about what he knows. The book contains some it.

Substance, Authority, Common Sense

The book is full of excellent insights and first-hand judgments. His careful consideration of Rabelais, and his point that literary critics are not, by temperament, inclined to understand humor, as distinct from wit or satire; his fine exposition of Romanticism and the character of Rousseau; his ability to go straight to the point about "Ossian," which is that it's second-rate stuff, whether Celtic remnant or eighteenth century imposture: these are the things which gives this book substance and authority.

Priestley brings common sense to his literary judgments, and he has no axes to grind.

He has his point of view, which is not the same thing. His criticism is much influenced by his admiration for the depth-psychology of Dr. C. G. Jung, who is very much a writer's psychologist.

His equation of Classical with the products of the conscious mind, and Romantic with the products of the unconscious, is not new, but his application of it to such a variety of writers, and with so much success, is.

He is fair to the classics, but he gives his heart to the romantics, and his shrewd judgment of Schiller, and his generosity toward Blake and Keats, show how discriminating he is in his favorite realm.

He is an expert at detecting the bogus in literature, and when he says that the Aesthetic Movement of the last century was social protest rather than a real artistic movement we see it with new eyes.

Another of his continuing themes, springing from his Jungian outlook, is the failure of our society to find a religion truly adequate to its needs.

Western literature, he points out, is a product of less than one-fifth of the total time of which we have historical and literary records, and less than a fifth of the history of mankind.

Shouting, Table-Pounding Allowed

He is at his best in discussing the changes in intellectual atmosphere which have taken place during the present century and I have seen no discussion of twentieth century thought which moves as swiftly and surely as his.

Admirable as he is in dealing with ideas, he is at his best in writing about men, and his tributes to the unjustly neglected Anatole France, and to the by no means neglected

Bertrand Russell are among the best things in the book.

He writes of Soviet literature as one who is able to relate it to the Russian literature of the Czarist days, and this will cast new light on it for many readers who think that everything in Russia was turned upside out with the 1917 revolution.

This book is a discussion of literature as it is seen through a warm, romantic temperament balanced by common sense and wide professional experience. Priestley is an artist, and he does not pretend to make the sort of judgments which he might expect from a man who was a critic only.

Because he writes with feeling, we can respond with feeling, and arguing with his book is not the least of the pleasures it offers.

He is prejudiced, but in a humane, well-bred fashion which is deeply persuasive. And, unlike so many people who set to work to tell us about literature, he can write. The pages speed along, so art

ART IN REVIEW

By ARTHUR CORRY

Promising Alberni Show Honors Victoria Artist

The first Vancouver Island art exhibition at Port Alberni might well be the forerunner of an annual well-designed and expertly event. Judging from the tremendous response of the drawn artists, the overflowing enthusiasm of sponsors, and monetary support of private, business and civic officials, the Alberni Valley Art Group need have little fear of not having complete success in this, or future shows.

The honorary chairman, Qualicum Beach." Here is a masterly classic painter, precise and almost photographic. Hon. Earle C. Westwood, after presenting the prizes to the winners in the oil and water color groups, declared the exhibition open.

Flemming Joergensen of Victoria won the first prize in oils for his "Boat on the Beach." A Corry semi-abstract in shades of off-white, oranges and blacks, capturing the essence of the sea, the simplified feeling of the seashore, and the patterned form of the hull.

Well constructed and designed, the picture creates an interesting, intimate scene of the west coast.

The work of Victoria artists composed approximately two-thirds of the entries accepted, and Nita Forrest received second prize in "Oils" for her "Blue Nude." This strong composition is in blue, black and off-white, with a voluptuous human form creating the complete picture.

Herbert Siebner, W. D. West of Victoria, and G. A. Sedola of Nanaimo, the jurors, are to be congratulated on their excellent job of selecting the 77 paintings out of the total entry of 430.

The winner of the chief prize at the Alberni Exhibition, Flemming Joergensen, opened a one-man show at the Point this last week. A collection of oil, casein, and water colors, showing fine compositions and refreshing color.

Flemming's smaller, very fine water colors are samples of some of his most recent and certainly some of his best work. Abstract "Town" for instance, with buildings in soft shades of brown, with a gray blue sky, and a hazy orange sun.

Using ink and water color he has created "City Scape," a block-like pattern representing buildings and breaking—the otherwise abstract design by the ingenious use of telephone poles and their wires.

These later paintings show a return to nature and the development of a singular style. "Forgotten City" emphasizes this trend, as the building shapes and tree forms become visible. This award winning picture in oil and Casein is one of Joergensen's best. Also in this class is "Seated Woman,"

The list contains children's books from many nations which, in the jury's opinion, are a valuable contribution to children's literature and to international understanding.

Poetry Selections Fair and Generous

The Oxford Book of Canadian Verse. Edited by A. J. M. Pickthall, etc. One suspects that Smith's centre of interest is unnatural, in the poetic achievement of Canada of the present century; however, his selection from the poetry of E. J. Pratt is disappointingly limited (principally excerpts from "The Cachalot and Brebeuf").

YOUNG POETS

Nonetheless, Smith's choices are generally satisfying; there are attractive and provocative selections from F. R. Scott (including the famous or infamous "The Canadian Authors Meet"), Earle Birney, Malcolm Lowry, Roy Daniels, A. M. Klein, Irving Layton, P. K. Page, the editor himself, and many others. One of the pleasing aspects of the volume is Professor Smith's inclusion of several young poets who are just becoming established in reputation; among them are James Reaney, Jay Macpherson and Daryl Hine.

This anthology will provide much pleasure and intellectual stimulation: it shows much of the fascination in the development of Canadian poetry; once imitative and nationalistic (or provincial), it has grown to impressive stature in cosmopolitan form and subject matter.

"Where did you go?"
"Home."
"What did you do?"
"Nothing—except things I never have time to do ordinarily."
"Like, for instance . . . ?"
"Like, for instance, some good, steady reading and some pretty fancy cooking."

This sort of thing is typical of the opening gambit of most conversations since I got back to the office from my belated vacation. In fact, presumably most returnees are familiar with the routine.

There is a great emphasis on "where" and "what". So much so that you tend to become a bit shiftily-eyed and under-privileged-feeling when you have to admit that you didn't go to San Diego or Alaska and that you didn't climb Mont Blanc or swim the Hellespont or tan your hide on the beach at Waikiki.

Certainly I admit it's stimulating to visit unfamiliar places and indulge in rare activities if they mean something to you and it's not being done just for the sake of conversation upon return home.

Robson Biography 22-Carat Gold

So now you all know what I did on my vacation—indulged my liking for gourmet cookery (and the subsequent eating thereof) and comfortably and untroubledly read a couple of books, one that took me a journey to the South Seas, the other, a biography of that remarkable character actress, Flora Robson.

This book—by Janet Dunbar (Clark, Irwin and Company, $4.75)—would be a treasure to anyone with an interest in the theatrical arts but for the stage-struck student it is absolute 22-carat gold.

Apart from the fascinating verbal close-ups of dozens of theatre personalities on both sides of the Atlantic, this straight-forward account of an actress' life-long struggle to attain and maintain success, is humbling.

No Criticism Ever Dismissed

It was Flora Robson's humility that allowed her to accept and carefully weigh all criticism that came her way from teachers, directors, journalists and friends. It never allowed her to dismiss a piece of criticism, no matter how devastating or surprising without a close examination.

At the same time she was possessed of an intelligent mature ego that kept her aware of her particular abilities.

The simple, unglossed account, the details of theatrical life in a rep company, in the provinces, in London's West End, at Elstree and Hollywood and New York, are all bathed in a clear, cool dispassionate light that makes everything wonderfully vivid.

We learn about Tyrone Guthrie and Earle Grey in their formative period with parti-

SHEILA HENIG FILLS IN FOR PAT

A last-minute change in guest artists for Victoria Symphony Orchestra concerts next weekend, was made with lightning speed today, when news came that Patricia Perrin, the 15-year-old pianist who was to have been guest soloist in Beethoven's C-major Concerto, had broken her wrist. Mr. Gruber was fortunate in engaging Miss Henig, one of last season's soloists, who will play the same concerto.

COMING OPERA VISIT
WELCOME RETURN

Local opera fans will welcome news that the New York Opera Festival will return Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, playing "Madame Butterfly," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" at the Royal Theatre.

This is the company that gave enjoyable performances of "La Bohème," "Traviata," "Carmen" and "Rigoletto" on previous visits. All their productions are full-scale with good-looking costumes and sets. Casts are made up of fresh and genuine talent.

Opera-starved communities across the continent are grateful for the annual tours of this competently managed company.

Flyers Chalk Up Second Triumph; Canucks Win 3-1

Edmonton Flyers are winging away, but keep your eyes on those Spokane Comets.

Flyers won, Comets lost in Western Hockey League action Friday evening but even in defeat the Spokane club looked a vastly improved club over the one that finished in the cellar last season.

An early start—three goals in the first 12 minutes—gave defending champion Vancouver Canucks a 3-1 victory over Spokane as the two squads made their 1960-61 debut before 2,420 fans in Vancouver's Forum.

FLYERS ON TOP

The Flyers, sparked by a rookie and a veteran, downed Calgary Stampeders 5-3 for their second win and first place in the eight-team professional circuit.

Larry Poppe, acquired from New York Rangers three days ago after spending six seasons in the National League, was the standout for the Canucks. He scored one goal and thrilled the crowd with repeated rink-length dashes.

Other Vancouver goals were by Orland Kurtenbach and Murray Wilkie, who had been slated for trading to Spokane in a deal which fizzled earlier Friday.

The sole Spokane goal was by Colin Kilburn, sold to the Comets Thursday by Vancouver.

HUNT REFUSES

The deal under which Wilkie would have gone to the Comets fell through when Les Hunt refused to report to the Spokane club from Seattle. The deal also called for the Comets' Eddie Stankiewicz to go to the Canucks.

Outstanding work by rival goaltenders Cesare Maniago of Vancouver and Carl Wetzel of Spokane highlighted the game. Wetzel came through with some big saves after a shaky start and wound up with 36 stops.

A total of 3,741 fans at Edmonton saw rookie Ed Joyal score two goals for Flyers. Veteran Bob Solinger tallied on a rink-length solo rush to put Edmonton ahead for the first time after 6½ minutes of the third period.

Other scorers for Bud MacPherson's Flyers were Ed Diachuk and Chuck Holmes.

Calgary counters were fired by Wally Hergesheimer, Lou Jankowski and Ron Leopold.

ROOKIE SPARKLES

Rookie goalie Art Lariviere, who fashioned a 5-0 shutout over Winnipeg Warriors in Calgary Thursday night, played another outstanding game. The first Edmonton goal, came at 9:43 of the second period, giving Lariviere 89 minutes and 43 seconds of shutout hockey.

General manager Bud Poile of Flyers announced during the game that Roger DeJordy had signed his contract and Poile was to meet later with Gene Achymichuk.

Neither DeJordy or Achymichuk played Friday night because they had not signed with the club.

Nanaimo will play at Chilliwack Oct. 29 and New Westminster will play to Powell River for a game the same night.

NEW YORK (AP) — Remember the first inning of the first game of the World Series when Bill Virdon of Pittsburgh was lauded for his surprise "delayed steal" that so upset New York Yankees they went on to drop a 6-4 decision to the Pirates?

Well, it just wasn't so.

Virdon's steal of second and advance to third when there was no Yankee to cover second base for catcher Yogi Berra's frantic throw, came as a result of a missed sign. And, to tell the truth, the Pirates were more confused than the Yankees.

The authority for this new version is Dick Groat, the

GREY CUP COMMITTEE ISN'T TAKING CHANCES

VANCOUVER — Grey Cup Week—and the hi-jinks that go with it—isn't considered a danger period, but a special $1,000,000 policy covering bodily injuries, will be issued. The policy covers the city, the Grey Cup Festival committee and its operators.

Another policy for $50,000 will protect these parties against claims for property damage.

This doesn't include the 30 specially-designed floats for the big parade which will be insured separately.

Casey's Laying Low; Yankees Not Talking

TONY KUBEK MUST REST HIS VOICE

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Shortstop Tony Kubek of New York Yankees was discharged from hospital Friday after being detained overnight for observation of a throat injury suffered in Thursday's World Series finale.

Kubek's vocal chord was severely bruised when a ground ball off Bill Virdon's bat took a bad hop and hit him in the throat.

"He was in much better condition," a hospital spokesman said. "He could talk a little. He wasn't allowed to talk during the night and this apparently helped. The doctors told him to rest his voice as much as possible."

OTTAWA (CP) — Import halfback Adolphus Frazier, who played one game this season with Ottawa Rough Riders, has been signed by the Big Four football club.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Casey Stengel remained incommunicado at his hotel today, while increased but unconfirmed reports had him finished as manager of the New York Yankees.

Loss of the series to Pittsburgh Pirates in the final game Thursday apparently had no bearing on the situation. Friends of owners Dan Topping and Del Webb indicated Casey probably would be denied another contract solely because of his age, 70.

One report had first-base coach Ralph Houk already notified he was the new manager.

However, a spokesman at Yankee headquarters said, "We won't have anything to announce for a few days."

Whether Casey wants to continue as manager was not known. Before the series, he had given some indications he planned to retire after 12 years at the Yankee helm and other indications he expected to be with the club again in spring training.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Tony Peden won the visitors' prize for the 1960 Grey Cup game, which may be seen on television channels 2 and 6, beginning at 7:30 tonight. Radio broadcast of Lions-Saskatchewan games may be heard on CKWX, Vancouver, at 7 p.m.

Boden Retains Golfing Laurels

Gorge Vale's Norm Boden and A. W. Rideout of Oak Bay were trophy-winners in the 26th annual Greenskeepers' tournament played Thursday at Victoria Golf Club.

Boden carded a three-over-par 72 to beat clubmate Fred Painter by five strokes to take the Young Trophy for a second straight year. Rideout edged Uplands' F. Gavan for the Senior Trophy while Painter

'KING KONG' OF BOWLERS

The Bigger They Are The Harder They Bend

RED PRESSURE 'UNBEARABLE'

ELMSFORD, N.Y. (NEA) — Billy Welu is not as massive as football's Big Daddy Lipscomb, as hefty as Dallas Long, the shot putter, or as bulging as the boxer Sonny Liston, but he is the King Kong of the keglers.

And the six-foot-five, 220-pound 1959 BPAA All-Star bowling champion finds that the bigger they are, the harder they bend.

"Contrary to popular opinion, being big has certain disadvantages for a bowler," he said in Elmsford between sessions of taping a news television series, which commenced this month over the NBC network for a run of 26 Saturdays.

"One of them is that, having longer legs, he must develop a deep knee bend, which can be awkward. In the ideal swing, the ball hits the lane like an airplane making a perfect landing. If a big man doesn't use enough knee bend, the ball is liable to bound—and that's disastrous."

ADVANTAGES, TOO

Then a big man has two strikes against him?

"Oh, no. The big feller has a few advantages, also," admitted the former sports writer and big league baseball prospect from Houston. "For instance, he usually has long arms. This means he can reach farther across the foul line, maintaining control of the ball for a longer time before letting it go and shortening the distance the ball must travel before hitting the pins. This tends for greater accuracy."

The little fellow has a few advantages, too," reminded Dick Weber, the Tiny Tim of the pin toppers. "His swing is naturally more compact, so he has less area to go wrong in."

Billy agreed with Weber, who couldn't scale in at 125 with his pockets loaded with bricks.

Welu, who is as serious as a beatnik reading poetry during a game, spotted one of the "idiot cards" used to cue the announcer. Picking it up, he imitated the announcer's delivery, intoning: "Be sure to turn to stare, kids, ask for autographs and perfect strangers greet us like old friends. It's wonderful."

He employs three secretaries to transact his business and answer fan mail.

LIKE MOVIE STARS

Known as "Mr. Airline" to his associates, Welu travels an average of 150,000 miles a year, rolling about 5,000 practice and 1,000 competition and exhibition games. He has appeared in every state as well as Japan, Korea, Okinawa, Germany, Austria, France and the Azores. He remembers when bowlers were obscure, as was the sport.

"Before automatic pinspotters and television, nobody knew us," he said. "Now we are like movie stars. People turn to stare, kids ask for autographs and perfect strangers greet us like old friends. It's wonderful."

PRODUCTION OFF

Mines, Mills
Utilities Hit
New 1960 Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question whether the United States is moving into a business recession sharpened today following announcement that the output of mines, mills and utilities dipped to a 1960 low in September.

The federal reserve board reported that its index of industrial production moved down in September to 107 per cent of the 1957 average, a drop of four points from January's peak of 111 per cent. In August, the board further disclosed, the index sagged two points instead of one as previously estimated.

A possibility of further decline in October was suggested by the fact that steel mill operations, an economic bellwether, have failed to show the usual normal autumn pickup.

However, Roger Blough, chairman of United States Steel Corporation, predicted this week that "some improvement" in steel output will develop in this last quarter of the year. For the last few months more steel has been consumed than was produced, he said.

ECONOMISTS DIVIDED

Government and private economists have been divided for some weeks on the question of whether the economy was on a "high plateau" with some improvements in prospect, or had entered the beginning stage of a mild recession.

Friday's commerce department report on total personal income showed it virtually unchanged in September from August; wages and salaries had dropped but this was slightly more than offset by a rise in unemployment pay, veterans' benefits and other social insurance payments.

The federal reserve board report Friday drew no conclusions. It began:

"Industrial production declined further in September, while construction activity increased. Total employment and personal income changed little and sales at retail stores declined. Bank credits, both loans and investments, increased substantially."

Bond Market
Continuing
To Falter

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS
Canadian bond markets continued to falter this week with maturities showing losses of up to a point.

Short terms were down 25 cents to 75 cents and the longer term issues fared $1. The recent CNR five-per-cent bonds due Oct. 1, 1987, were quoted at 96 1/2, down from their issue price of 97 1/2. Government of Canada 5 1/2-per-cent bonds due Oct. 1, 1962, were selling at $104.10 to $104.25, while the 4 1/2-per-cent conversion loan bonds of Sept. 1, 1972, were at 93 1/2 to 93 5/8.

Average yield on the 91-day treasury bills was 2.48 per cent, a rise of .28 per cent on the week. The 192-day bills yielded 2.88 per cent, up from last week's 2.52 per cent. Day-to-day money was quoted at 2.2 per cent.

The Ontario Hydro 5 1/2-per-cent bonds due Jan. 15, 1978, were quoted at $101.40 to $101.45. The municipal market was relatively quiet during the week. On the corporate market the Bell Telephone 5 1/2-per-cent first mortgage bonds due Aug. 2, 1982, were offered at $103.25 to yield 5.62 per cent.

First Length
Of Pipeline
Sets Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first 52 miles of a natural gas pipeline system being built in Northwestern British Columbia has at a cost of $83,000,000 has been completed by Gas Trunk Line of British Columbia Limited, it was announced here Friday.

The first stage was completed in the record time of 30 days.

The line, which extends from the Buick Creek field north and west of Fort St. John to the Laprise Creek field, will transport gas from newly established reserves to the West Coast Transmission Limited Pipeline.

Crews on the first two pipeline branches will be completed before the winter. More than 520 workers, the majority of them British Columbians, are employed on the project.

Engineering now is under way on the second phase of the project which will include a 30-inch mainline system from Chetwynd north of Fort Nelson, B.C., a distance of approximately 250 miles.

OLD FIGHTER
'ONE-SHARE'
SWEENEY DEAD

TORONTO (CP) — William Randolph Sweeney, 78-year-old professional troublemaker at mining company meetings, left an estate of $265,506 when he died Aug. 1, it was disclosed Friday.

Mr. Sweeney, known as "one-share," Sweeney started his career as an Elizabeth, N.J., taxi driver, later read law and finally found fame in the Canadian mining industry.

Possessing sometimes only one share, Mr. Sweeney would go into battle in shareholders' meetings making use of every legal device he could think of to help the side he was on.

CANADA'S SHARE
$125 Million
Aid to India
5-Year Plan

BOMBAY (CP) — Canada is likely to provide financial assistance to India's third five-year plan to the extent of $125,000,000, press dispatches here say.

Canada, it is reported, will continue assisting this country at the rate of $25,000,000 annually under the Colombo Plan. This works out roughly at half the total aid to be disbursed by Canada to Asian countries.

The Evening News, Bombay's leading evening daily, reports that "discussions are understood to have begun between New Delhi and Ottawa on the form of aid India would prefer from Canada." It adds:

"A substantial part of this aid is wheat as Canada has a surplus of this commodity."

Other commodities may include non-ferrous metals and fertilizers besides specialized equipment for hospitals."

Press reports here also say that more Indian students and trainees may go to Canada for higher studies and specialized work. More collaboration in the field of atomic research is also expected.

Versatile Linseed Oil Handyman's Best Pal

Linseed Oil Candidates

By MR. FIX

One way to spot a real pro among handymen is to notice how many uses he finds for linseed oil.

Linseed oil is available in both raw and 'boiled' form. Raw linseed oil can take up to four days to dry after applying it. The boiled product dries quickly; it is often used in with turpentine or other thinners.

CHECK FIRST

Before using either form for thinning paint check the manufacturer's instructions. Linseed oil is often used to turn ordinary house paint into a primer coat.

You can also use raw linseed oil to rejuvenate old putty that's become too hard to work with. Add the oil and work it into the putty until it's pliable.

Use boiled linseed oil for all the other jobs mentioned here.

NEW BRUSHES

Before dipping a new brush in paint, soak the bristles in linseed oil for 24 hours. You'll find the brush more pliable, easier to use.

Linseed oil is one of the oldest and best wood preservatives. Brush the oil on unpainted fence pickets and posts every year. Wipe it on garden tool handles to keep them from drying out.

Never paint a ladder since you'll never be able to tell what defects are developing underneath. Use linseed.

FURNITURE

Mix two parts of linseed oil to one part of turpentine and you have an excellent preservative and polish. Apply to outdoor furniture and rub in until dry.

Use the oil-turpentine mixture right over your painted window sills to preserve them. Apply it to screen doors, screens and windows to help them withstand the weather.

Dipping nails and screws in linseed oil will keep them from rusting, make them easier to use.

Use linseed oil in place of wax on drawers to keep them from sticking.

QUIZZING the GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. I would like to plant bulbs which will flower after the main batch of daffodils are finished, and find tulips are too tall for my seaside garden which gets strong winds in early spring. What can you suggest? K.M., Beach Drive.

A. There are many low-growing tulips which are not bothered by winds. You will find them in the single and double early groups, many of which are strongly fragrant, and in the species groups.

Names to look for are: Tulipa praestans Fusilier, any of the Kaufmanniana species, T. fosteriana princeps, Crown Imperial, Prince of Austria, Flamingo, General de Wet, Keizerkroon, Sunburst. These are only a few; you will be sure to find some or all at local bulb dealers. Other low-growing spring flowering bulbs are: pulcherrima, scilla, triteleia and chionodoxa. All are available locally, and are well worth growing since they can be left to increase in colonies for many years.

FIX-IT FORUM

Q. Can aluminum be soldered? I was told it cannot be.

A. There is a comparatively new product in the market that will usually do the job.

This "instant-slate" is available in either random or rectangular pattern, to any given size, for fireplace hearths, entrance halls, steps, risers, patios, and any other type of job where slate is used.

Each piece is artistically cut to size, color and uniformity, and is then individually matched. Each piece is numbered, and a diagram is provided for quick, easy installation.

Colors available are black, green, coco-brown, mottled green and red.

Pre-cut fireplace hearths are stocked in all standard sizes and in the full range of colors.

This novel service is practical in every part of B.C., because the material, already pre-cut and ready to lay, can be shipped on short notice, through a well-known firm and its affiliates throughout B.C. and Vancouver Island.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Only Laziest Gardener Need Endure 'Poor Soil'

By JACK BEASTALL

One of the most frequently heard complaints from gardeners is that their soil is "no good," although the majority cannot explain in what way it is "no good."

Whenever I hear this remark I try to pursue the subject in order to determine the trouble and find an answer, because soil is a home-made product which can be made to suit both plants and gardener.

Those who are really concerned about their soil will give enough details for an opinion to be formed, and more often than not the soil is not so much at fault as the gardener, the latter having a yen to grow plants which require conditions neither the soil nor the type of gardener can provide.

Leaves may be applied around larger shrubs as a mulch, keeping them in place with a light layer of soil.

Planting of all kinds of trees and shrubs can go ahead now. Roses and fruit trees are usually available by the end of this month.

Dahlias, gladioli and tuberous begonias may be lifted now. Frost has touched many districts, giving a good excuse for clearing ground for further planting of permanent features.

Hard-wood cuttings of many deciduous (leaf-losing) flowering shrubs, also black currants, may be taken now, inserted in a prepared sandy bed outdoors and will be rooted by early spring.

Watering in greenhouse and porch should be done carefully now, so that individual pots get the amount required and none is spilled on benches and floors. This is more important than one is used at night.

Cyclamens and cinerarias in pots for winter blooming indoors need a little warmth at night, so that temperature stays around 50-55 deg. F.

Remake rhubarb beds if in well-drained soil.

Cut asparagus foliage to ground level. Scatter bonemeal and top dress with old manure or compost.

A fold-away play table for small children can be made by shortening the legs of an old card table and covering it with oil cloth.

Because soil has been known to us since early childhood we assume it has always been present and that it will remain for ever. This assumption is the first step toward a soil that is "no good."

A potted plant gives us an excellent illustration that soil is not something of a permanent nature.

We start with a rooted cutting and a pot full of mixture containing soil from the garden, humus (rotted manure, rotted compost, leaf-mould or peat moss) and some sharp sand.

Eventually, the cutting becomes a large plant and the time comes for it to be repotted. When the original pot has been removed we find a ball of matted roots in place of the soil mixture with which we started.

Names to look for are: Tulipa praestans Fusilier, any of the Kaufmanniana species, T. fosteriana princeps, Crown Imperial, Prince of Austria, Flamingo, General de Wet, Keizerkroon, Sunburst. These are only a few; you will be sure to find some or all at local bulb dealers. Other low-growing spring flowering bulbs are: pulcherrima, scilla, triteleia and chionodoxa. All are available locally, and are well worth growing since they can be left to increase in colonies for many years.

Food gone

We can go a step further and disentangle the roots and collect on a piece of white paper any soil particles which remain. Under a powerful magnifying glass it is apparent that this small amount of material consists of tiny balls of clay and the sand we added to the original mixture. All the garden soil and the humus has gone.

These particles of sand and clay are the materials which form the base of all garden soils, while the dark colored (black or brown) component is plant and animal waste in some stage of decomposition.

It was from this dark material, together with air, sunlight and moisture, that the original cutting made its supply of food and the millions of new cells by which it increased in size.

In a larger pot with fresh soil, the cutting (which is now a plant) will continue to make roots, stems, leaves, and flowers, until the humus content of the soil mixture is again used up and nothing remains but grains of sand and clay.

MILLIONS

As long as we continue repotting in fresh soil the plant will survive, but if we leave it potbound and fail to supply chemicals in liquid form for its continued existence, it will become sickly and eventually die.

In the pot we had only one plant to consume the soil mixture, but in the garden it is possible to have millions. Certain lawn seed mixtures, for example, contain three million seeds to the pound, and when sown at the rate of two pounds to one thousand square feet, there can be approximately six thousand seeds to the square foot.

Each plant, whether it is an individual grass plant in a lawn, a flowering shrub, or a vegetable, converts the colored content of the soil into tissue, leaving the mixture of sand and clay which it cannot use.

When a gardener complains of his soil being "no good" he says in effect that he has neglected "repotting" his garden plants in fresh soil. All the humus has been used by the plants and the grains of clay and sand remain.

AT TORONTO

'Ivy League' College Grows

TORONTO (CP)—An exclusive $15,000,000 liberal arts residential college for 1,500 students is planned here in an effort to stop the flow of top high-school graduates to United States universities.

Dr. Murray G. Ross, president of York University which opened this fall, announced Thursday that by 1980 York hopes to enroll about 16,500 students.

The new university had only 100 students when it opened its doors in September in an old University of Toronto building downtown. Next year, it will move to Glendon Hall, a scenic 86-acre estate in the Don River valley.

PLAN DOWNTOWN SITE

Dr. Ross told a press conference that after five years at Glendon Hall construction will start on a main university building, close to the downtown area. It will house basic liberal arts faculties, with arts, science, professional and graduate schools.

A second project on the suburban Glendon Hall site will be a residential college designed to attract Canadian private school graduates. Dr. Ross said Canada has not been able to compete with "Ivy League" colleges such as Harvard, Princeton, Yale and Columbia.

Glendon Hall was originally bequeathed to the University of Toronto, and now has been turned over to York.

A third project in York's development program is a degree-granting evening college for 3,000 to 5,000 students on a separate campus close to industrial and commercial centres. This college would explore a new concept of adult education, in which students have supper and spend the whole evening on campus.

Dr. Ross said he hoped that within two years the evening college will be operating. Within five years students at Glendon Hall would move to the 200 to 400-acre campus of the main university.

Unemployment May Cause Wave of Crime

Keep Doors Locked, Police Chief Warns

Victoria could be in for one of the worst crime waves in years this winter because of the unemployment situation, according to Police Chief John Blackstock.

He issued a warning today against keeping large sums of money on business premises and urging householders to keep doors locked and not leave valuables about.

Persons seeing loafers or prowlers after dark are asked to call police.

The chief's warning was issued on the heels of an armed hold-up late Thursday at the Busy Bee grocery store, Hillside and Prior, in which $40 was taken.

Police were closely watching all Vancouver Island ferries after a report that a car with California licence plates was seen leaving the scene of the crime.

Fire Front Quiet

All's quiet on the forest front this week.

There were only 16 new fires during the week, bringing the year's total to 4,114.

Total cost this year to the forest service has been $4,663,346.

There are 34 fires still burning in B.C., and the outlook's for rain next week, says the service.

APPOINTMENT FILLS YEAR-OLD VACANCY

The B.C. Energy Board has finally found a chief engineer—after almost a year without one.

The cabinet Friday approved appointment of Percy R. Purcell to the post at a salary of $12,000 a year.

Mr. Purcell has been employed in Ottawa by the water and power bureau of the Department of Northern Affairs.

He'll start work Dec. 1, this year.

The energy board was created after the conclusion of the Shrum royal commission into the affairs of B.C. Hydro which followed the resignation of general manager H. L. Briggs in 1958 chiefly over finance policy.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

First official job for newly-sworn in Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes was to sign 42 orders Friday after a cabinet meeting.

His signature is the official seal of approval.

Gen. Pearkes was sworn into office Thursday night at Government House.

A film about penitentiary parole entitled "The Racket" will be featured at a meeting of Colquitz Junior High School PTA in the auditorium on Tuesday evening at 8.

The film will be accompanied by a talk given by W. A. Scones, case worker with the John Howard Society.

Albert W. Reid, Canadian journalist and editor who has wide international experience, will address L'Alliance Francoise Monday at 3:30 p.m. in the Art Gallery, Moss Street.

Mr. Reid has lived in Victoria since 1954.

Regular meeting of Esquimalt council will be held at the Municipal Hall on Monday at 7:30 p.m.

George F. Rosman appeared in city police court today on a charge of assaulting M. A. Forester on a Victoria street on May 9 last.

He was further charged with driving a motor vehicle that had no rear-view mirror, inefficient brakes and ineffective headlamps, on June 16.

Rosman, who said he had missed until Monday.

ASK The TIMES

Q. Please tell me the correct age of actress Lana Turner. K.H.

A. She's 39.

Q. When I was young someone gave me a book called "Ten Girls From Dickens." Did Dickens ever write such a book? A.A.M.

A. No. Your gift probably consisted of a compilation of stories taken from Dickens' works dealing with his younger female characters.

BUT OTHERS PREFER SAFETY, MODERNIZING

Mercury Lights Turn Us Blue, Women Howl

By PAT DUFOUR
and SUE BUTT

"Mercury lights turn our complexions blue," says Mrs. Malcolm Anderson.

"Away with the cluster lights. Mercury lighting modernizes the city," says Myrna Sutherland.

Victoria women are as divided as city fathers in the controversy over doing away with ancient cluster lights downtown. Alderman on Thursday decided to retain cluster lights.

But Ald. Elmer McEwen said the ladies don't want mercury lighting because they make their complexions look weird.

He has some supporters.

ADD TO VICTORIA

Elaborating, Mrs. Anderson asks: "Who wants to end up with a pasty look?"

She has other reasons for wanting to keep cluster lights.

"Guess they're mostly sentimental," she explains. "Let's face it—they certainly add to Victoria. Mercury lighting won't do anything but detract."

J. H. Todd, great-uncle of Mrs. Anderson's uncle, installed the first cluster lights during the 20's.

"But mercury lighting will modernize the city," says Miss Sutherland. "I'm all for them. Most women wear more makeup at night, anyhow! The average woman doesn't wear too much of it during the day but chooses deep colors at night. Mind you—if you prefer the pale colors—I guess you're out of luck!"

Miss Sutherland is a cosmetic assistant in one of the city's largest departmental stores.

SOME DECORATION

"Street lights," says Mrs. D. S. Thompson, "are for lighting streets, not beautifying faces of women who linger under them! They should be chosen, though, with some regard for decorative value."

"Let's cut down purse-snatching by getting brighter

lighting," advises Mrs. L. E. Kennedy. "As for how we look—who cares?"

"It's depressing," is Mrs. John MacCormac's reaction to mercury lighting. "Meeting under such lights is hard on both you and the other person."

LIGHT UP DARK SPOTS

"Complexions don't mean a thing," says another woman. "Let's have lighting that will eliminate dangers of dark spots during night driving."

Mrs. J. A. Small, mother of two teen-age daughters, also advocates mercury lighting.

"They'd be safer for women and young girls. They don't do a thing for a woman's looks—especially if you feel a bit under the weather—but you can't have everything."

Even the teen-agers have something to say.

"It's all in the mind," is opinion of 17-year-old Jeanette Philion. "I'm all for mercury lighting. It sure doesn't bother me any."

Chest Drive Bogs Down

Greater Victoria Community Chest campaign officials are worried.

This year's biggest-ever drive for $350,000 started off well enough with a healthy $42,000 in advance gifts but after two weeks canvassing the total has crept to only $68,280.

Returns to date indicate a repetition of last year's results when the campaign ended $25,000 short of its goal. Last year, however, the total was made up by digging into the Chest's reserve fund.

This year the reserve fund is not large enough. Any shortage in the total figure for 1960 will result in agencies' shares being cut back, officials warned before the campaign started.

LAST $30,000

"On the basis of present returns it seems we shall easily clear the $300,000-mark," a Chest spokesman said today, "but we are very anxious about bringing in the last $30,000."

Earlier this week Bernard Van Aggen, campaign chairman, expressed the hope $100,000 would be collected by today and appealed to all canvassers to send in donations as soon as they were received.

About 60 academic prizes will be presented, consisting of scholarships and bursaries donated by individuals, businesses and various organizations.

They total about $10,000. Guest speaker will be Dr. W. Kaye Lamb, Dominion archivist and national librarian.

He was formerly B.C. Librarian and archivist.

His subject will be "A Balanced Diet of Learning."

10 DECLINED

There has been an improvement, however, in the commercial and industrial division of the campaign.

Mrs. Dolly North, Lifetime Resident, Dies at 83 Years

Mrs. Annie Georgina (Dolly) North, a life-long resident of Victoria, died in the Belmont Nursing Home this week, aged 83.

Her husband, J. H. North, died overseas while serving in the First World War.

Mrs. North is survived here by three daughters, Mrs. Mabel Bell, Mrs. Hazel Ray and Mrs. Irene Irvine; her brother, G. W. Rossen, and her brother-in-law, Joseph North.

She also leaves seven grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at Hayward's Funeral Chapel followed by cremation.

BCHIS FOOTS RECORD BILL OF $45,000

Biggest-ever bill is being run up for the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service by a young man injured in a 1951 car smash—and still in bed.

The bill so far is $45,000. The car victim, whose name has not been revealed, gets his bill—less $1 a day—paid by the government insurance scheme as long as he requires the facilities of an acute care a month.

Health Minister Eric Martin, in a statistical mood, said Friday 23,000 British Columbians go to hospital for acute care a month.

BCHIS pays out an average $3,775,000 a month for them.

Average time abed is 10 days, but there are many exceptions—like the nine-year wonder.

More than half the patients stay in less than six days, said Mr. Martin.

Waldo Whiffs Big One

At Pittsburgh

Waldo Skillings, new Social Credit MLA elect for Victoria, has a new respect for the principle that all things should be followed to the finish.

He sat in on all seven games of the World Series, but missed the fantastic finish to the 1960 baseball classic.

Skillings, who was accompanied by Premier W. A. C. Bennett at two of the games had to catch a plane and decided to beat the rush of fans leaving Pittsburgh's Forbes Field after Thursday's deciding game.

With the Yankees ("my team") leading 7-4 after seven innings, he figured that was it, and headed for the nearest exit.

The finish is already history. The Pirates erupted for five runs in the eighth inning and finally won the world championship on Bill Mazeroski's dramatic home run in the ninth.

Assemblies Spurn Divorce Sanction

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. W. E. McAlister, general superintendent of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, said today there has been no change in the assemblies' views on divorce and remarriage.

He said a church committee presented the recent biennial conference at London, Ont., a report recommending that a

BY CATHOLIC HIERARCHY

Sunday Workday Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Catholic Conference has expressed "grave concern" over the growing tendency by commerce and industry to consider Sunday an ordinary working day.

The cardinals, archbishops and bishops of Canada, in plenary session here, said in a statement:

"If this tendency should one day be confirmed by legislation or, by increasing tolerance, should come to be accepted as normal in our society, then all who proudly profess the doctrine of Christ, would witness the disappearance of institutions which were established through the unceasing efforts of many generations."

It added:

"Will Sunday work eliminate unemployment? Will the abolition of the Lord's Day call down upon our country that protection of divine Providence which we all know to be so urgently necessary?"

"The Canadian hierarchy believes that our federal and provincial leaders will, in their wisdom, find ways to overcome our present difficulties, and even to anticipate possible future economic fluctuations in such a way as to uphold the sanctity of the Lord's Day in years to come."

Family at the right is Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Beischer and their five children, one of them a foster child. Another foster child has recently gone to a permanent home. At left, Mrs. C. La Bossiere and her four children (Mr. La Bossiere was working when the picture was taken). This family is waiting for its first foster child. The La Bossieres have said they will open their home to any child regardless of race, and in any age group, who needs their care and affection. Social worker at door of Spencerhouse, where Family and Children's Service, one of the Community Chest Agencies, has its office, is Mrs. Bernice Packford.

"They Open Their Hearts And Take Children Into Their Homes"

This afternoon the Family and Children's Service, with the help of its Women's Auxiliary, held a coffee party from 3 to 5 p.m. in Holyrood House to honor more than 200 foster parents who are looking after children from the ages of one month to 18 years in their homes. These children come from many different kinds of families, yet they have one thing in common; their own parents cannot look after them. The foster parents, too, vary widely but they all have something in common: They want to help children. They take children in, open their hearts and homes to them, knowing full well that these are "borrowed" children and that some of them eventually return to their own families. The foster parents give unstintingly of their love, patience and understanding so that their foster children shall have the opportunity to live and grow in a normal, stable environment. It is not always easy going for either the child or the foster parents but through the united efforts of the foster parents and the social worker, the child can get over his first hurt and learn to trust human beings again. The coffee party was planned for a Saturday afternoon in order that foster fathers might attend. It honored present and past foster parents as well as those waiting for their first foster child.

And a woman who held a babe against her bosom said, Speak to us of Children.

And he said:

Your children are not your children.

They are the sons and daughters of Life's longing for itself.

They come through you but not from you, And though they are with you yet they belong not to you.

You may give them your love but not your thoughts.

For they have their own thoughts.

You may house their bodies but not their souls.

For their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams.

You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you.

For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday.

You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth.

The archer sees the mark upon the path of the infinite, and He bends you with His might that His arrows may go swift and far.

Let your bending in the archer's hand be for gladness;

For even as He loves the arrow that flies, so He loves also the bow that is stable.

Novelty Money Banks Will Make Saving a Pleasure!

By PENNY SAVER

Children will love to save pennies through one of the novelty wooden combination money banks and weather indicators that I saw in one downtown store this week. Imported from Germany, they're in the form of a colorful Swiss chalet, complete with a tiny brother and sister that go in and out—depending on the whims of the weatherman!

Yellow roof is topped with a cheery red chimney and flowers and miniature trees provide gay landscaping. You can almost hear the trill of the bluebird that's perched on a tiny fence!

Money slot is in top of roof and a thermometer is attached to front of chalet. These can be bought for $2.75.

Identical in appearance are ones that also act as a musical box. Wind them up and you'll hear the lilting notes of "The Blue Danube." This type sells at $5.95.

If you, on the other hand, prefer the old-fashioned piggy bank there are chubby pink piglets in pottery that sell at $1.49. Tips of their curly tails and toe-nails are touched with blue. Joyful smiles on their faces are bound to appeal to any child.

For a final touch of fantasy there are clusters of roses and pansies perched on each generous back! A pink rubber stopper at base of piglet releases the precious pennies when the young owner has a mind to go on a spending spree!

What small child hasn't, at some time, fallen in love with some of the animal characters created by Walt Disney? Now selling downtown are a series of china Walt Disney animals that each come in their own colorfully candy-striped hat box.

Whether your youngster's favorite happens to be Bambi, Dumbo, Pluto or Flower, the fluffy little skunk; these and many others can be found in the series. Imported from England, all are selling at 69 cents.

WHY GROW OLD?

Don't Be Old at 30—Get Some Fun Out of Life

How was your day? Perhaps this was an unusual day, especially fraught with problems and extra duties and hectic happenings. But if it was a somewhat usual run-of-the-mill day you might like to check yourself with the following list. The way you show up in your answers probably indicates how long you will prolong the youthful years of life for garnish.

1. Have you had any fun? By that I mean, have you gotten a kick out of anything you have done, or has it seemed to be just dull routine? If the latter is true, you should do something about it. Either add new interests to your daily living, or become more interested in what you are doing. Boredom can make you old at 30 or even sooner.

2. Have you taken any short rest periods? These are absolutely magic in effect, and for a busy woman, can make the whole world look different.

3. Have you had any constructive exercise which really whipped up circulation?

4. Have you seen to it that you got all of the essentials for good nutrition in your meals?

5. Have you given your complexion essential care in cleansing and lubrication? This is absolutely necessary if you are to look as young—or younger than you are.

6. Have you deliberately banished at least one worry—some thought from your mind?

7. Have you had at least one or two good laughs today?

8. Have you had any time alone, even a few minutes? This is essential for real re-

Time Hidden in Golden Bracelets

The sleeve's the thing this season, and whether coat, suit, dress or costume, it's short, shorter, shortest, to bare the wrist for the most dramatic watch jewellery in years.

The watchmakers of Switzerland have taken this fashion cue and created a new look in timekeeping jewellery. Massive gold bracelets (they're really fine quality Swiss watches) look strictly ornamental and appear to have nothing to do with the functional business of keeping time.

The reason: not a dial shows, and the covers of dials are so precisely engineered into the over-all design of the jewellery that even a careful observer would not guess that the most accurate time in the world is ticking away inside.

Famous for accuracy, precision and long life (many quality Swiss watches become heirloom pieces, handed down from generation to generation), these new watches are excellent examples of the beautiful gold bracelets every woman wants to own. (A touch of a spring by a fingertip releases cover to reveal the time—otherwise, the watch really functions as a bracelet.)

Broad ribbons of gold, sometimes three inches in width, are woven, braided, linked or twisted into the newest bracelet fashions which become treasured possessions for years to come. Jewels are added to many designs with individually set diamonds, sapphires, rubies, emeralds winking out from these bands of gold. These ornate styles are appropriate for afternoon through evening wear—an elegant way to keep track of the time (hidden inside, of course).

Quality bracelet watches are not for the weak-hearted in terms of money expenditure. They represent an investment in beauty and time that will last a lifetime. Like a blue-

Wedding in Cadboro Bay Church

Rev. William Hills officiated in Church of St. George the Martyr today when Margaret June Harrison, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Harrison, 298 Beach Drive, became the bride of Richard King Willis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Willis, 659 Mount Joy Avenue.

Standard baskets of white chrysanthemums decorated the church and the same flowers were at the altar. White satin ribbon marked guest pews. Organ music was played by Gordon Britton, organist.

Philip W. Willis came from Montreal to be best man, Ushers were Larry Wood and Thomas E. Harrison.

and sequins trimmed the scooped neckline, lily point sleeves and full skirt. Chapel veil was held with a tiara of pearls and sequins. Red Delight roses, stephanotis and ivy were in the bouquet.

Featuring the waltz-length gown of Mrs. Maynard L. Norton, matron of honor, was a cape collar, which slanted over a tight bodice in the same hyacinth blue lustre satin. Bouffant skirt was applied with lace medallions. Small matching hat and chrysanthemum bouquet completed the ensemble.

Heather in Bouquets, Church Decorations

Sprigs of heather were mingled with white chrysanthemums and ivy that decorated St. Andrew's Cathedral this morning when Constance Arlene Robertson became the bride of Edward Ronald Harris. Heather was also in the bouquets carried by the bride's attendants.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Robertson, 825 Burdett Avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Harris, 1250 Crown Crescent. Rev. E. J. O'Dwyer officiated. W. A. Wilson sang Schubert's "Ave Maria" and organist was Miss M. McKay.

Entering the church on her father's arm, the bride wore a floor-length gown of silk organza styled with a front panel of Chantilly lace on the skirt, which was slightly off train. Sleeves were lily point. Finger-tip veil of scalloped illusion misted from a headband of seed pearls and sequins. She carried a bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis and ivy.

Four cousins of the bride were maid attendants. These were maid of honor Miss Linda Kerv, bridesmaids Misses Linda Benolkin and Bonnie Ringrose and flower girl Janine McCausland. A bronze crystal charm gown was worn by the maid of honor with a matching pleated headband. See green crystal charm gowns and

R. W. McDaniels was best man and ushers were Ove Witt, David Brown and Douglas Park.

Col. M. D. Robertson, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast at a reception at Colwood Golf Club. Three-tier wedding cake, made by the groom's mother, centred head-table.

Leaving on a honeymoon trip to Banff and Sun Valley, the new Mrs. Harris chose a teal blue wool gown with matching hat and accessories in Swiss chocolate shade. A mink stole topped her ensemble.

Flower girl's dress was of bronze taffeta. Headband was in tone and fall flowers were in the tiny basket she carried.

Car Mishaps Injure 10 Friday Night

Two persons were admitted to city hospitals Friday night and eight were treated for minor injuries and released following a series of car accidents in the Greater Victoria area.

Pte. R. W. Morrison, 18, Work Point Barracks, sustained cuts and bruises when a passenger in a car that skidded sideways into the path of another vehicle on Esquimalt Road near the E and N overpass at 9:30 p.m.

Five other persons in the two cars were checked by doctors and released. Morrison was detained in HMCS Naden Hospital.

Mrs. Etta Nearing, 60, of 1514 Gladstone, received a check-up at Royal Jubilee Hospital for facial bruises received in a two-car crash at Gladstone and Fernwood at 11:20 p.m. She was a passenger in a car.

HURT ON WINDSHIELD

John Hansen, 17, of 3030 Quadra, and passenger Bob Anderson, 17, of 2581 Blackwood, received injuries when the vehicle struck the rear of another car stopped in a line of traffic on Douglas and Topaz shortly after midnight.

Cyclist Michael Hartley, 15, of 378 Cook, was in St. Joseph's Hospital with leg injuries and face cuts after a bicycle-car collision at Quadra and View.

Bernard Silvergeiter, Stelly's Cross Road, was thrown from his car at East Saanich Road and Patricia Bay Highway Friday night when it was hit by another vehicle.

He was not injured, but both cars had to be towed away.

AROUND THE WORLD

One Too Many Marlon Brandos

"The one thing I regret is giving Marlon Brando my name." The man who spoke was Marlon Brando, Sr., father of the movie actor, Marlon Brando, Jr.

"One should not have that much ego to name his son after himself," Mr. Brando, Sr., said.

Buchwald

You're not ashamed of being named Marlon Brando, are we?" he asked him.

"No, it's not that," he said. "It's just too much damn confusion. When I take a plane or check into a hotel everyone expects to see my son and when I show up they look at me as if I were an imposter. Only last week I paid a hotel bill and when I signed it I heard the cashier say 'He's a phony. He's not Marlon Brando.'

"It's even tougher on my wife because her first name also happens to be Anna, the same as Marlon's ex-wife, so no matter which name she uses everyone thinks she's Marlon's ex-wife, instead of my present ambassador Fired?

HAYANA (AP) — The foreign ministry said Friday night Mrs. Teresa Casuso, who quit her post as an ambassador to the Cuban United Nations delegation Friday, was fired last Tuesday. The ministry said in a statement Mrs. Casuso was asked to return to Havana Oct. 3 to explain irregular activities. When she refused on the grounds of ill health she was dismissed, the statement said.

one. My wife's a quiet woman and doesn't like the confusion."

Mr. Brando, Sr., doesn't act in any way like his famous son. He's quiet, speaks clearly and appears to be a successful business man. Before he became manager of Marlon Jr., he was a salesman in Illinois. He also has two daughters—one an actress and the other an artist—and six grandchildren.

Mr. Brando, Sr., is president of a company called Pennebaker, owned by his son, who happens to be one of the vice-presidents.

Pennebaker (which is the maiden name of Marlon's mother), is in the motion-picture producing business. The company is in the process of making two films in Europe this fall—one is "Paris Blues", with Paul Newman, Jo Ann Woodward and Sidney Poitier, the other, to be made in London, is "Naked Edge", with Deborah Kerr and Gary Cooper. This is the reason Mr. Brando, Sr., is now in Paris. Meanwhile, Mr. Brando, Jr., is in Tahiti making "Mutiny on the Bounty" for somebody else's company. That's the way it is in Hollywood these days.

Many sons become presidents of corporations through their fathers, but few fathers become presidents of corporations through their sons. We asked Mr. Brando, Sr., how it happened.

"Well," Mr. Brando, Sr., said, "one day when Marlon was in Street-car" he called me and said: 'Pop, I can't handle this money situation. Can you do something about it?' All his life I knew Marlon never cared anything about money—it has never been important to him—so I figured somebody had to help him, and I agreed. Things kept getting bigger and bigger and pretty soon he was making an awful lot of money. Then it became fashionable for movie stars to start their own companies and so we started Pennebaker. The idea was not only to make films with Marlon in them, but outside pictures as well. We've made two so far—'Shake Hands With the Devil', with James Cagney, and 'One Eyed Jacks', with Marlon.

"One Eyed Jacks", which was also directed by Marlon Brando, Jr., is estimated to have cost $5,000,000, which makes it one of the most expensive horse operas in history. It won't be released until next summer.)

Death Car Hearing Continues

We asked Mr. Brando, Sr., if he had "anything to do with making Marlon Jr., an actor." "No," he said. "Marlon's mother was a very fine actress. She never did anything with it but nevertheless she created an interest in acting in the three children. I was never against the kids doing anything as long as they did it well. When Marlon finished high school and said he wanted to go to New York and study for the stage I told him to go right ahead."

"Does your son interfere in the running of Pennebaker?" we asked him. "No, he prefers to stay away and let us run the show. At the same time he's conscious that once in a while some muscle is needed to get what we want and then he helps out."

"But Marlon isn't a business man. He considers himself a craftsman and he is very humble about it. The reason his press relations will never be any good is that he wants to talk about his work and they want to talk about his private life."

We asked Mr. Brando, Sr., if he got along with Mr. Brando, Jr.'s ex-wife, Ann Kashfi, of India, out of Cardiff.

He said: "Not too well. She doesn't like anybody who is named Marlon Brando."

Senior executives of the Victoria Daily Times Circulation Department took John Neilson to dinner last Wednesday evening. With him they entertained his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Neilson of 1117 Wychbury Avenue.

The occasion was considerably more than a pleasure social gathering. The Times men were paying their tribute . . . and they marked it with the gift of a briefcase to a young man who symbolizes a vital branch of their organization.

John Neilson became a Times carrier about seven years ago. That was his introduction to the world of business. He immediately set out to take full advantage of his opportunities. He increased the number of customers on his route and earned more profits. He won many valuable awards over the years for his sales ability and finally earned recognition for his leadership qualities and was promoted to the position of station Sub-manager.

Now John is entering a new sphere. He has enrolled at Victoria College and is concentrating on higher education.

He is able to finance this step from savings earned as a Times Carrier and Sub-manager.

As they honored John Neilson Wednesday evening, the Times Circulation leaders were paying tribute to an outstanding young man, a person who has reached

'ROUGHHOUSE'

Gun Mishap Wounds Two Boys

By AB KENT

Two Saanich boys are in hospital with serious wounds received in a "roughhouse" with an older brother shortly before 7 a.m. today in their parents' kitchen.

Daniel William Patterson, six, and Robin Melvin, eight, of 1503 Charlton, both were shot through the lower chest by a bullet from a 22 semi-automatic rifle which had been left on a kitchen table the night before.

Daniel, reported to have liver and lung injuries, was shot through the right side of his body and is in "fair" condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Robin, shot through the left chest, is in "good" condition, St. Joseph's reported.

Both were hit by the same bullet, which passed through Daniel and lodged in Robin, Saanich police said.

Detectives and juvenile officers are still investigating the incident.

UP EARLY

They said the two wounded boys and their 10-year-old brother Richard were up before other members of the family, got dressed and went into the kitchen to play. The parents were still asleep.

When one of the boys picked up the rifle, Robin ran behind Daniel as the trigger was pulled.

Their father, Samuel Patterson, said the rifle had been left on the table under a pile of clothes, but was found by the boys before he awoke.

Shaken by the experience, he had this to say to other people who leave guns where children can get them:

"In my opinion, anyone who keeps guns in their house should get rid of them, especially if they have children."

"They always say 'It can't happen to me.'"

Patterson said he raised calves at his rural home and had the rifle handy "because something has been biting the calves — a mink, I think."

"I've been sitting up there by the barn at night waiting for it, and I get up in the night and first thing in the morning, too."

"I usually get up at 6:30, but not today, being Saturday. My older boy, Donnie, usually wakes me before he goes to work, but he knew I didn't have anything to do today."

He said he did not own a gun himself. This one belongs to Donald, 19, the eldest of the family of 10 children. The rifle is a bolt-action .22 long.

Patterson jumped up, rushed to the kitchen and as soon as he found what had happened called the telephone operator, who got in touch with Saanich police.

Police ambulance took Robin to hospital and a fire department crew and ambulance took the more seriously hurt boy to emergency.

TYPHOON LOLA LEAVES HAVOC IN ISLANDS

MANILA (Reuters) — The Pampanga River, swollen by torrential rains from Typhoon Lola, flooded three towns about 50 miles north of here today as the latest report brought the typhoon death toll to 41.

A press report from the southern Philippines said outbreaks of influenza, diarrhoea and dysentery have killed another 45 persons on Samar Island, badly hit by another typhoon last week.

Unemployment May Cause Wave of Crime

Keep Doors Locked, Police Chief Warns

Victoria could be in for one of the worst crime waves in years this winter because of the unemployment situation, according to Police Chief John Blackstock.

He issued a warning today against keeping large sums of money on business premises and urging householders to keep doors locked and not leave valuables about.

Persons seeing loafers or prowlers after dark are asked to call police.

The chief's warning was issued on the heels of an armed hold-up late Thursday at the Busy Bee grocery store, Hillside and Prior, in which $40 was taken.

Police were closely watching all Vancouver Island ferries after a report that a car with California licence plates was seen leaving the scene of the crime.

The investigation is continuing.

All's quiet on the forest front this week.

There were only 16 new fires during the week, bringing the year's total to 4,114.

Total cost this year to the forest service has been $4,663,546.

There are 34 fires still burning in B.C., and the outlook's for rain next week, says the service.

APPOINTMENT FILLS YEAR-OLD VACANCY

The B.C. Energy Board has finally found a chief engineer—after almost a year without one.

The cabinet Friday approved appointment of Percy R. Purcell to the post at a salary of $12,000 a year.

Mr. Purcell has been employed in Ottawa by the water and power bureau of the Department of Northern Affairs.

He'll start work Dec. 1, this year.

The energy board was created after the conclusion of the Shrum royal commission into the affairs of B.C. Hydro which followed the resignation of general manager H. L. Briggs in 1958 chiefly over finance policy.

First official job for newly-sworn in Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes was to sign 42 orders Fariday after a cabinet meeting.

His signature is the official seal of approval.

Gen. Pearkes was sworn into office Thursday night at Government House.

A film about penitentiary parole entitled "The Racket" will be featured at a meeting of Colquitz Junior High School PTA in the auditorium on Tuesday evening at 8.

The film will be accompanied by a talk given by W. A. Scoones, case worker with the John Howard Society.

Albert W. Reid, Canadian journalist and editor who has wide international experience, will address L'Alliance Francoise Monday at 3:30 p.m. in the Art Gallery, Moss Street.

Mr. Reid has lived in Victoria since 1954.

Regular meeting of Esquimalt council will be held at the Municipal Hall on Monday at 7:30 p.m.

George F. Rosman appeared in city police court today on a charge of assaulting M. A. Forester on a Victoria street on May 9 last.

He was further charged with driving a motor vehicle that had no rear-view mirror, inefficient brakes and ineffective headlamps, on June 16.

He was in hospital, was remanded until Monday.

ASK The TIMES

Q. Please tell me the correct age of actress Lana Turner, K.H.

A. She's 39.

Q. When I was young someone gave me a book called "Ten Girls From Dickens." Did Dickens ever write such a book? A.A.M.

A. No. Your gift probably consisted of a compilation of stories taken from Dickens' works dealing with his younger female characters.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "ASK THE TIMES." Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of general interest.

BUT OTHERS PREFER SAFETY, MODERNIZING

'Mercury Lights Turn Us Blue,' Women Howl

By PAT DUFOUR
and SUE BUTT

"Mercury lights turn our complexions blue," says Mrs. Malcolm Anderson.

"Away with the cluster lights. Mercury lighting modernizes the city," says Myrna Sutherland.

Victoria women are divided as city fathers in the controversy over doing away with ancient cluster lights downtown. Aldermen on Thursday decided to retain cluster lights.

But Ald. Elmer McEwen said the ladies don't want mercury lighting because they make their complexions look weird.

He has some supporters.

ADD TO VICTORIA

Elaborating, Mrs. Anderson asks: "Who wants to end up with a pasty look?"

She has other reasons for wanting to keep cluster lights.

"Guess they're mostly sentimental," she explains. "Let's face it—they certainly add to Victoria. Mercury lighting you're out of luck!"

J. H. Todd, great-uncle of Mrs. Anderson's uncle, installed the first cluster lights during the '20s.

"But mercury lighting will modernize the city," says Miss Sutherland. "I'm all for them. Most women wear more makeup at night, anyhow! The average woman doesn't wear too much of it during the day but chooses deep colors at night. Mind you—it you prefer the pale colors—I guess you're out of luck!"

Miss Sutherland is a cosmetic assistant in one of the city's largest departmental stores.

SOME DECORATION

"Street lights," says Mrs. D. S. Thompson, "are for lighting streets, not beautifying faces of women who linger under them! They should be chosen, though, with some regard for decorative value."

"Let's cut down purse-snatching by getting brighter

lighting," advises Mrs. L. E. Kennedy. "As for how we look—who cares?"

"It's depressing!" is Mrs. John MacCormac's reaction to mercury lighting. "Meeting under such lights is hard on both you and the other person!"

Even the teenagers have something to say.

"It's all in the mind," is opinion of 17-year-old Jeanette Philion. "I'm all for mercury lighting. It sure doesn't bother me any!"

Mrs. J. A. Small, mother of two teen-age daughters, also advocates mercury lighting.

"They'd be safer for women and young girls. They don't do a thing for a woman's looks—especially if you feel a bit under the weather—but you can't have everything."

Chest Drive Bogs Down

Greater Victoria Community Chest campaign officials are worried.

This year's biggest-ever drive for $350,000 started off well enough with a healthy $42,000 in advance gifts but after two weeks canvassing the total has crept to only $68,280.

Returns to date indicate a repetition of last year's results when the campaign ended $25,000 short of its goal. Last year, however, the total was made up by digging into the Chest's reserve fund.

This year the reserve fund is not large enough. Any shortage in the total figure for 1960 will result in agencies' shares being cut back, officials warned before the campaign started.

LAST $30,000

"On the basis of present returns it seems we shall easily clear the $300,000-mark," a Chest spokesman said today, "but we are very anxious about bringing in the last $30,000."

Earlier this week Bernard Van Aggelen, campaign chairman, said Friday 23,000 British Columbians go to hospital for acute care a month.

BCHIS pays out an average $3,775,000 a month for them.

Average time abed is 10 days, but there are many exceptions—like the nine-year wonder.

More than half the patients stay in less than six days, said Mr. Martin.

DR. W. KAYE LAMB

PRIZE-GIVING

Archivist To Speak

Victoria University annual prize giving will be held Friday at 8 p.m. in the new auditorium on Gordon Head campus.

University officials invite the public to attend.

About 60 academic prizes will be presented, consisting of scholarships and bursaries donated by individuals, businesses and various organizations.

They total about $10,000.

Guest speaker will be Dr. W. Kaye Lamb, Dominion archivist and national librarian.

He was formerly B.C. librarian and archivist.

His subject will be "A Balanced Diet of Learning."

10 DECLINED

There has been an improvement, however, in the commercial and industrial division of the campaign.

Mrs. Dolly North, Lifetime Resident, Dies at 83 Years

Mrs. Anna Georgina (Dolly) North, a life-long resident of Victoria, died in the Belmont Nursing Home this week, aged 83.

Her husband, J. H. North, died overseas while serving in the First World War.

Mrs. North is survived here by three daughters, Mrs. Mabel Bell, Mrs. Hazel Ray and Mrs. Irene Irvine, her brother, G. W. Rossen, and her brother-in-law, Joseph North.

She also leaves seven grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at Hayward's Funeral Chapel followed by cremation.

Waldo Whiffs Big One At Pittsburgh

Waldo Skilling, new Social Credit MLA-elect for Victoria, has a new respect for the principle that all things should be followed to the finish.

He sat in all seven games of the World Series, but missed the fantastic finish to the 1960 baseball classic.

Skilling, who was accompanied by Premier W. A. C. Bennett at two of the games, had to catch a plane and delayed to beat the rush of fans leaving Pittsburgh's Forbes Field after Thursday's deciding game.

With the Yankees ("my team") leading 7-4 after seven innings, he figured that was it, and headed for the nearest exit.

The finish is already history. The Pirates erupted for five runs in the eighth inning and finally won the world championship on Bill Mazeroski's dramatic home run in the ninth.

Waldo sadly listened to it all, via a taxi radio on his way to the airport.

Revision Courts Sit in February

Courts of revision have been approved for municipalities throughout B.C. to hear complaints about 1961 assessments on property.

Official approval came Friday from the cabinet.

Victoria's court of revision under terms of the Equalized Assessment Act will open in City Hall Feb. 2 next year.

Esquimalt's will be Feb. 1 in the municipal hall.

Oak Bay court sits Feb. 6 in the municipal hall.

First of a series of Saanich sessions will be Feb. 1 at Royal Oak.

A view Royal court will be held Feb. 8 in the Community Hall.

Last year the local CNIB, a Community Chest agency, organized another specialist and an operation for the removal of a cataract was carried out successfully earlier this year at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

For the past few years Miss Binnie has been helped by Mrs. Lily Walls, a member of the women's auxiliary to the CNIB, who learned the sign language of the deaf in order to communicate with her.

With Mrs. Walls acting as a sign interpreter Miss Binnie was able to give her impressions of her new-found sight:

FINAL BULLETINS

Alouettes Thump Hamilton, 43-21

MONTRÉAL (UPI) — The Montreal Alouettes, fighting desperately to make the Big Four playoffs, scored touchdowns in every period today to rout the Hamilton Tiger-Cats, 43-21, and move into sole possession of third place.

Search Turns Up No Trace of Renix

VANCOUVER (CP) — The first phase of a mass underwater search for the body of missing businessman Daniel Renix ended today without success.

More than 30 volunteer skindivers—strung together like beads on a 300-foot line towed by three boats—scanned the sandy bottom off westend Stanley Park and reported nothing to aid in the search.

Even more volunteers were expected Sunday when the hunt resumes under water.

Hunting Poor as Duck Season Opens

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thousands of hunters trotted into the soggy marshes and wet bushlands of the lower Mainland and the Okanagan Valley today for the opening of the duck, quail, pheasant and partridge seasons.

A wet, soggy dawn greeted an estimated 20,000 duck-and-pheasant hunters on the lower Mainland, which failed to live up to expectations for opening day. A preliminary check after the first few hours of hunting showed only 32 ducks by 50 hunters, and only five pheasants by 31 hunters.

Kelowna Still Hopes to Stay in OSHL

KELOWNA (CP) — Kelowna Packers clung to a thin hope today that they may not be washed up yet in the Okanagan Senior Hockey League.

Although a scheduled game Sunday with the newly-entered Merritt Grand Luchies was cancelled, OSHL President Bob Gilhooley said today there is still some hope.

Japan Police Fight Leftists

TOKYO (UPI) — Some 1,000 policemen clashed with members of the fanatical Zengakuren Students Federation today in a stick-swinging brawl in downtown Tokyo. At least 10 students were arrested immediately and many suffered minor injuries.

The clash occurred just outside Hibiya Park in the heart of Tokyo where a few thousand students had massed to begin a march to join an estimated 50,000 other Leftist demonstrators gathered around the Diet (Parliament) building and adjacent official residence of Premier Hayato Ikeda to protest the assassination of Japan's top Leftist leader last Wednesday.

BATONS SWING
As the first group of about 500 students moved out of the park in their traditional snake-dancing march, helmeted police lashed out with truncheons.

The students fought with police for more than 30 minutes before retreating back inside the park shouting demands for the resignation of the entire Ikeda cabinet to accept responsibility for the fatal stabbing of Socialist Party chairman Inejiro Asanuma by a fanatic Rightist student.

INSULTS YELLED
"Down with the government," the students shouted as they waved huge red banners and flags. "Get out, terrorist police. Idiots. Ikeda is another Syngman Rhee."

While the students fought with police another estimated 50,000 Leftist demonstrators demonstrated noisily but peacefully around the Diet and premier's residence. Some 8,000 police were mobilized to guard against possible violence.

planes that part of the crew was left in port.

First report of the mystery object came a week ago when the crew of an air force plane reported it saw a submarine, a navy spokesman said. The navy would say only that the sighting was in international waters.

"If it's a Russian sub, it has a right to be there. We would only keep it under surveillance," a navy source said.

Ninety-nine out of 100 such contacts turn out to be a school of fish, a whale or some other type of marine life, the source explained.

'ROUGHHOUSE'

Gun Mishap Wounds Two Boys

By AR KENT

Two Saanich boys are in hospital with serious wounds received in a "roughhouse" with an older brother shortly before 7 a.m. today in their parents' kitchen.

Daniel William Patterson, six, and Robin Melvin, eight, of 1503 Charlton, both were shot through the lower chest by a bullet from a .22 semi-automatic rifle which had been left on a kitchen table the night before.

Daniel, reported to have liver and lung injuries, was shot through the right side of his body and is in "fair" condition at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Robin, shot through the left chest, is in "good" condition, St. Joseph's reported.

Both were hit by the same bullet which passed through Daniel and lodged in Robin, Saanich police said.

Detectives and juvenile officers are still investigating the incident.

They said the two wounded boys and their 10-year-old brother Richard were up before other members of the family, got dressed and went into the kitchen to play. The parents were still asleep.

When one of the boys picked up the rifle, Robin ran behind Daniel as the trigger was pulled.

Their father, Samuel Patterson, said the rifle had been left on the table under a pile of clothes, but was found by the boys before he awoke.

Shaken by the experience, he had this to say to other people who leave guns where children can get them:

"In my opinion, anyone who keeps guns in their house should get rid of them, especially if they have children."

"They always say 'It can't happen to me.'"

Patterson said he raises calves at his rural home and had the rifle handy "because something has been biting the calves—a mink, I think."

"I've been sitting up there by the barn at night waiting for it, and I get up in the night and first thing in the morning, too."

"I usually get up at 6:30, but not today, being Saturday. My older boy, Donnie, told me before he goes to work, but he knew I didn't have anything to do today."

He said he did not own a gun himself. This one belongs to Donald, 19, the eldest of the family of 10 children. The rifle is a bolt-action .22 long.

Patterson jumped up, rushed to the kitchen and as soon as he got there, he found the telephone operator, who got in touch with Saanich police.

Police ambulance took Robin to hospital and a fire department crew and ambulance could treat the more seriously hurt boy to emergency.

TYPHON LOLA LEAVES HAVOC IN ISLANDS

MANILA (Reuters) — The Pampanga River, swollen by torrential rains from Typhoon Lola, flooded three towns about 50 miles north of here today as the latest reports brought the typhoon death toll to 41.

A press report from the southern Philippines said outbreaks of influenza, diarrhoea and dysentery have killed another 45 persons on Samar Island, badly hit by another typhoon last week.

Rhodesia Fears Another Congo

SALISBURY (Reuters)

— A ban on public meetings came into effect throughout Southern Rhodesia today in the latest government move to prevent "another Congo" in this tense Central African nation.

The ban, due to last a month, was announced Friday as Rhodesian troops moved into Negro townships around Salisbury, Bulawayo and Gwelo in a major show of strength. The ban excludes only sporting, religious or cultural meetings.

The troop movements caused tension to mount throughout this internally self-governing British colony where bloody riots and strikes have erupted in the last week.

Nazi Prison Guards Get Life Terms

DUESSELDORF, Germany (UPI)

— A German court sentenced two former Nazi concentration camp guards to life imprisonment today for murdering inmates in what the prosecution termed "conditions of complete bestiality."

The sentences handed down against Otto Boehm, 50, and August Hoehn, 47, were the severest the court could give in West Germany which has no death penalty.

A third man was sentenced to five years in jail for aiding in the wartime killings at the notorious Sachsenhausen concentration camp. The verdict was pronounced by a Dusseldorf court after a three-week trial.

Both Boehm and Hoehn were S.S. guards at Sachsenhausen in which more than 5,000 persons died during the Second World War.

Young Flier Makes Navy Give Up Ship

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (UPI)

The navy, which prides itself on never giving up the ship, admitted today it had given up.

The fast-talking young air force man who now faces a possible 10-year term and $10,000 fine for his escapade.

Airman Lawrence Lionel Lynch, 23, of Travis Air Force base appeared Monday at Mare Island navy shipyard in Vallejo and identified himself as a navy pipefitter third class.

He reported that he had been assigned to select a boat for air force personnel stationed at Travis Air Force base. He selected a 40-foot, $17,350 launch.

Lynch carried a bona fide requisition signed with a false name. But it did carry the right requisition number for the boat which Lynch was believed to have obtained by phoning the Oakland, Calif., Naval Supply Centre.

Authorities finally compared notes and the would-be yachtsman was put into Solano County Jail here on charges of theft of government property.

Meeting Needed On Arms, Berlin

SCARBOROUGH, England (CP) — Prime Minister Macmillan, in a speech winding up the Conservative party's annual conference, said today he is ready for a meeting with Premier Khrushchev to discuss problems posed by Berlin, Germany and disarmament.

The prime minister said he told the Soviet leader at a New York meeting that the problem of Berlin and Germany must be handled in a way that does justice to the reasonable desires of the German people through negotiation and not by force.

"I have said so both privately and publicly. Indeed, all three Western powers said it in their joint statement in Paris last May."

Macmillan's speech added emphasis to the speech given by other senior ministers this week that Britain must remain economically strong and make an effort to draw closer to Europe.

World Trade Vital Need of Britain

He stressed that Britain's prosperity and expansion depend on an expansion of world trade. "To achieve that expansion, we are working on different schemes to increase economic co-operation between the countries of Europe."

Two groups have been formed—the Six and the Seven as we call them. It is our aim to bring them into better harmony to the mutual advantage of all.

"You can be sure that we shall not overlook in any of these plans the vital interests both of Commonwealth trade and British agriculture."

Macmillan paid tribute to Commonwealth leaders who attended the UN General Assembly recently.

Macmillan suggested a conference of scientists from East and West to get disarmament negotiations going again. He rejected an impractical Khrushchev's suggestion that general disarmament be thrashed out by the 99 countries belonging to the United Nations.

'MEDICAL MOOCERS' MAKING BRITONS MAD

SCARBOROUGH, England (CP) — Americans and other foreigners who come to Britain to receive free medical treatment were characterized as cheap moochers today by the Conservative party conference.

By an overwhelming majority, the 4,000 conference delegates adopted a resolution calling for an end to exploitation of the British national health service by visitors from other countries. Health Minister Enoch Powell promised firm government action to halt the practice.

HONOLULU (AP) — A navy hunter-killer force, led by the carrier Kearsarge, steamed through the Pacific today, in search for an unidentified underwater object that could be a submarine or a school of fish.

By early morning, nothing had been sighted by the big carrier, its sonar-equipped anti-submarine airplanes or the four destroyers accompanying it.
